Housing Shortage Is Eased

The University Park housing area east of campus is nearing completion and will ease the strain on off-campus housing but will by no means eliminate it.

Anita Kuo, supervisor of off-campus housing, said University policy is to accommodate 50 per cent of incoming freshman. The remaining 5 per cent will be living off-campus.

Mrs. Kuo said that there is adequate off-campus space in supervised housing to meet the demand of incoming students in the fall.

She said it is probable that some of the marginal housing, mostly unsupervised, may not be occupied because of the increase of good housing available. Marginal housing is that which is below University approved standards.

There is a good deal of neat, clean off-campus rooms available for single as well as married students, she added.

Mrs. Kuo reminded all undergraduate students that by University regulations they are required to live in supervised housing. Special permission is required for an undergrad to live in an unsupervised unit. Undergraduate students aged 21 or over may live in unsupervised housing providing they have at least a 3.0 grade average.

She added that last year undergrads living in unsupervised housing were allowed to remain in their units to fulfill their contracts but this year the Housing Office will not make that allowance. Any undergrad who does not have authorization to live in unsupervised house must move to supervised housing regardless of contract arrangements.

Single, undergraduate students who are under 21 and are juniors with at least a 3.25 grade average may live in unsupervised housing if they meet other authorization requirements.

Mrs. Kuo said that all supervised houses will be checked by the beginning of fall quarter to assure sanitation and other facilities are being maintained to meet the Housing Office requirements.

During the spring quarter 1,000 unsupervised units were checked and will be rechecked after fall quarter begins to assure that the undergraduate regulation requirements are met by the students living in unsupervised housing units.

'Period of Adjustment' Opens Tonight for Five-Night Run

Honeymoon Misadventures Explored in Williams' Play

CURTAIN GOING UP — Saundra and Gil Lazier apply makeup for their leading roles in the Southern Players' production of "Period of Adjustment." It opens tonight in the Southern Playhouse.

Four-Man Committee to Study Rerouting of Student Buses

A committee has been appointed by John Paul Davis, vice president of the Carbondale student body, to study the rerouting of student bus service in Carbondale.

Chairman of the committee is James R. Standard, Liberal Arts and Sciences senator. Committee members, appointed by Davis from the student body are Thomas E. Bartinikas, Charles Beecham and Thomas M. Vaught.

The student bus service, an in-city bus service to bring students to campus, is under contract to the ANA Transit Co. in Chicago. The present route was set up in 1961.

This route begins at the corner of South Wall Street and East Main Street and goes northeast, then comes down University Avenue and goes to the University Center. From the University Center it goes to Thompson Point and then to Small Group Housing and returns to the University Center on the same route.

The reason for changing the bus route is a shift in off-campus population caused by extensive building on the east side of town.

Williams' Brother Here to See Play

Dakin Williams, brother of playwright Tennessee Williams, will be on campus tonight for the opening of "Period of Adjustment."

Williams, assistant U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Illinois, wrote the Southern Players that "Period of Adjustment" is one of his favorite plays and that he would like to come for the opening. Tickets were made available for him.

"Period of Adjustment," Tennessee Williams' uninhibited comedy, opens at 8 o'clock tonight in the air-conditioned Southern Playhouse for a five-night run.

The first presentation on the Southern Player's summer playbill, "Period of Adjustment" is a serious comedy

European Scientist To Visit Campus

L. R. J. Westermann, scientific officer at the Mathematical Institute, State University of Groningen, the Netherlands, will visit SIU July 12-14 to exchange information with teachers studying at SIU in a summer science institute.

Westermann is one of 15 European scientists and science teachers spending six weeks in the United States in an exchange program directed by the American Association for the Advancement of Science and sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

At Southern he will visit with high school mathematics teachers enrolled in a summer institute supported by the NSF. The institute is directed by W.C. McDaniel, professor of mathematics.

During the summer Westermann and the other 14 Europeans will visit 121 science institutes across the nation. Each visitor will spend a few days at eight or nine institutes.

A spokesman for the American Association for the Advancement of Science said the Europeans, who come from Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom, all were chosen for their excellence in teaching of science.

Students on 'Pro' Will Meet Today

A meeting of students who went on academic probation at the end of spring term is scheduled for 10 a.m. today in Morris Library Auditorium.

The meeting is planned so that probation students may learn what requirements they must meet in order to stay in school for the fall term.

Chief among these is that the student earn a 3.0 (C) average in at least nine hours of classes during the summer term, according to Dorothy J. Ramp, probation supervisor.

Mrs. Ramp said that in addition to the required meeting, students are urged to come to her office in T65 to get personal counseling. The office is open from 8:15 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. and from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. No appointment is necessary.

dealing with the trials of a newlywed couple and the misadventures they encounter on the night of their honeymoon.

The action of the play takes place in the living room of a home somewhere in a suburb of Cape Girardeau, Mo., on Christmas Eve. Sherwin F. Abrams, associate theater director, is director of this production, which is Tennessee Williams' first and only comedy.

The part of Ralph Bates is played by Gil Lazier, graduate student in the Department of Theater. Lazier has appeared in many Southern Player's productions and is currently completing work on his doctoral degree.

Sandy Lazier portrays the young bride, Isabel Haverstick. Mrs. Lazier has appeared as an actress with the Pittsburgh Playhouse and is the wife of Gil Lazier.

Charles Harris plays the part of the young bridegroom. Harris, a teaching assistant in the Department of English, recently directed "Christ in the Concrete City" and "The Potting Shed" for the Baptist Foundation on campus. Other cast members include:

Patricia Durry, a theater major, in the role of Mrs. McGillicuddy; Matthew McEnnerney, former actor and director for the Bishop Company of Burbank, Calif., as Mr. McGillicuddy; John Gedraitis, stage manager for this production.

Barbara Bristol, a theater major; Roberta Montross, a research assistant in the Department of Speech, and Elizabeth Mason, box-office secretary for the Southern Players.

Darwin Payne, theater designer, has designed an unusual tri-level set for the play. Charles W. Zoeckler, associate professor of theater, is technical director of the production.

Personable Professors Who Inspire Rate Students' 'A'

Rating college professors is something like the weather—everybody talks about it but hardly anyone does anything about it.

One of the few exceptions is Yale University where each year an undergraduate publication in which the profs are rated by the students is almost as eagerly awaited as the announcement of the new salary scale.

At SIU a few brave profs have been known to ask students to rate them at the end of the term. But this usually happens before the final grades are posted and some students naturally are reluctant to jeopardize that solid 'C' they have going into the final.

Nevertheless, a few students polled recently agreed to say for public print how they rate profs in general. Here are their answers:

The most important criterion in judging professors, according to students interviewed, is the ability to get the subject matter across.

A sophomore in business management who believes he is "fairly developed and mature" said that a good professor must possess "the ability to get material across to students, to reach the students on their own level and hold their interest."

Theodore R. Wetzell, a graduate student from Poughkeepsie, N.Y., ranks professors in terms of "positive impact" they have on him or what he has learned from them.

A junior majoring in history thinks he can judge how good or not professors are "by the amount of material they get across to me."

Mary Simpkins, a sophomore from Zeigler, is concerned about "whether the instructor can explain or discuss the material so that the students can understand it." She added, "Some instructors can't get down material to the students' level."

Another and the second most mentioned criterion has deep socio-psychological implications.

It is, as a senior from Chicago put it, "the ability to inspire and motivate the student." Lockhart C. Hines, a senior from Jamaica, N.Y., observed, "I think the basis of my judgment is his (the teacher's) ability to stimulate the student to greater heights. The teacher must create a level of interest that stimulates the student. He can be properly judged on his ability to create this atmosphere of learning in the classroom so the student can associate knowledge with reality. A conscientious student can."

"DAY, ED, THIS LOOKS LIKE IT MIGHT BE AN EASY COURSE!"

Other criteria were given. "Command of the subject matter, how he runs the class and the subject presented," are pretty important to Norma L. Blackwell, a graduate student from Metropolis.

Sara L. O'Neil, a topnotch

senior from DuQuoin, rates her profs "in terms of the work he puts into the course, the preparation, his interest, just how much he knows."

Miss O'Neil, as well as Karen A. Davidson, a sophomore majoring in journalism, like to see professors bring in information and comment from outside the textbook. Ideally, learning goes beyond absorbing the contents of books.

The man or woman who stands in front of the class to impart his or her knowledge, and wisdom, is perceived as a living, breathing personality.

A freshman from Murphersboro, oddly enough, judges her professors by some of their negative personal traits. One whom she isn't happy with was described as "brisk and impatient and unpleasant." She commented that personality is part of teaching.

Shirley J. Gilmore, a sophomore majoring in elementary education, and one of the two who showed any sign of personal whim in her views, said the "only way I would be able to rank them is on their personality."

The Daily Egyptian Book Scene:

College is Great - But Not too Great

The Sheepskin Psychosis, by John Keats. New York: J. B. Lippincott Co., 1965. 190 pp. $3.95.

Public attitude toward college diplomas is somewhat contradictory. Parents want their children to attend the best colleges and earn high honors, but these same parents, as employers, are suspicious of brilliance and prefer mediocrity.

A diploma is regarded as a working paper rather than evidence of outstanding attainment in the arts. The public insists that job applicants be at least bachelor of arts, and only socially acceptable place in our society for boys between 18 and 22. Mr. Keats thinks high school graduates are too young for college.

Some enter large, highly-selective universities because of outstanding professors but soon discover these professors have nothing to do with them and they are left to the mercies of graduate students. Incoming college adolescents need help and guidance from good teachers. Few receive it. Six out of 10 soon discover the college of their choice is not the place for them.

Valuable as collegiate experience can be, it is not valuable for everyone. We should recognize how young an 18-year-old really is.

He should loaf some. Let him spend time in the outside world. Let him discover himself and his ambition. Encourage him to travel in Europe. Travel is cheaper and will give him more education than four years in college.

Another reasonable alternative is army enlistment. The army challenges the gifted and provides vocational training for others. Industries allow young people to acquire vocational efficiency through their apprentice training program.

It is not heresy to acknowledge to ourselves and our children that going to college is not the only path to a happy and useful life.

College is great but not too great.

this insistence has been carried to such extremes that the entire nation is suffering from "sheepskin psychosis."

We need to distinguish between education and training. Education is concerned with concepts rather than vocational techniques. Education helps an individual develop a sense of perspective, while specific instruction in law or medicine is, in reality, vocational training.

College is a place where an adolescent can grow four years older during which time he is expected to acquire some appreciation of music, arts and politics. College is the

German Influence in America

The German Historical School in American Scholarship: A Study in the Transfer of Culture, by Jurgen Herbst. Ithaca, N.Y.: Cornell University Press, 1965. 262 pp. $5.75.

If this handsomely-bound book has any misprints, this reviewer was unable to find them. The print of the main text is clear and the footnotes and index are printed in larger than usual type.

The bibliographical notes between the main text and index are in the same large readable type as the main body of the book.

Study of Gestapo Activities Fails in Historical Value

The Gestapo: A History of Horror, by Jacques Delarue. New York: William Morrow & Co., 1964. 384 pp. $6.95.

The emphasis in the title of this book must be on horror—not on history.

Mr. Delarue attempted to deal with one of the most important aspects of the National Socialist dictatorship in Germany, the work of the Gestapo. But he failed because such a study can only be of historical value if based upon official documents, eye witnesses, contemporary sources and with an understanding of the political principles underlying the Nazi movement of that time.

Instead, we are reading a popularized version—with pictures—of the horrible crimes committed by the Gestapo. This reviewer feels that Mr. Delarue would have done a better study had he confined himself to the Gestapo activities in France instead of trying to write a history of the organization.

Also, many misspellings of German phrases and names could have been avoided by more careful editing. As it is, they help convince the reader of a lack of scholarly effort.

The history of the Gestapo remains to be written.

Cowboys' Best Friend Trots Back in New Edition

Mustangs and Cow Horses, by J. Frank Dobie, Mody C. Boatright and Harry H. Ransom, Dallas: Southern Methodist University Press, 1965. 429 pp. $7.50.

Published in 1940 by the Texas Folklore Society, this volume was soon out of print and at times has been listed in book catalogs at from $35 to $50. The new edition is a facsimile of the original and will be welcomed by folklorists, historians and the general reading public.

A considerable amount of printed material is available on the subject of western horse and one of the better more recent studies is The Wild Horse of the West (1945) by Walker D. Wyman. A well known novelist writing some years ago said that in Texas and other parts of the West "the history of the horse is equally as important as that of its owner."

Mustangs and Cow Horses consists of 37 pieces written by 32 writers and is organized in seven sections as follows: Mustang Texas, Mustangs of the Staked Plains, Legendary Wild Horses, Caballos, A-Riding and A-Pitching, Man and His Horse, and Horse Heroes. It is an anthology of horses and not of writers and is the best compilation on horses ever to be assembled. It brings together an abundance of first hand chronicles from a wide variety of sources.

The narrative of the wild stallion, Black Kettle, was taken from a locally circulated poorly printed pulp pamphlet and "Horse Lore of the Conquest" by Denhardt and is based on five letters written by the Spanish explorer Cortez to his king. Frank Collinson author of "Fifty Thousand Mustangs" was a regular contributor to such western pulps as Ranch Romances.

Badger Clark, George Catlin and John A. Lomax are well known writers as is Dobie who wrote four of the accounts. Although some of the writing are at times more vigorous than coherent, the narratives are all vital and lusty and accomplish their purpose. The numerous well chosen illustrations and drawings add to the attractiveness of the book.

It is recorded that on the side of a trail in Red River County, Texas, in 1840 there was a crude wooden sign on which was inscribed in a few rudely printed words a statement that clearly indicates the spirit of this colorful volume on horses. It read: "1 1/4 leagues off Rt. Hand Path... GEO. ANTONIO DWIGHT KEEPS MUSTANGS and People."

Jewish Humor In Cartoons

With a Little Bit of Mazeltov!, by Henry Leonard. New York: Crown Publishers, Inc. 1965. $1.

Dayenu means "it would have been enough," but Henry Leonard, author (a pen name for two persons—Rabbi Henry Rabin, director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations at Los Angeles City College and San Fernando Valley State College, and Leonard Pritkin, advertising and art director) didn't take this meaning literally.

If they had, their third volume of Dayenu cartoons "With a Little Bit of Mazeltov" would never have been published.

It's a laugh a page and emphasizes again the inimitable and blessed capacity of the Jew for finding humor in every situation and being able to laugh at his own absurdities.

Only one with a deep love for his religion and people can point out with tongue-in-cheek humor, as these men do, the inconsistencies and foibles of his Jewish fellow American.

of this otherwise excellent study. It is as if the author felt at times somewhat nettled by the results of his investigations, which convincingly establish that the German historical school of social science did have a considerable influence on American university departments of history, political science, economics and sociology, as well as social ethics.

In fact, Herbst admits, it had a revitalizing effect on American higher education in general. In his last chapter the author sums up his findings admirably: "At its best the mutual interpenetration of a liberal and a vocational education helped turn schoolmasters and technical experts into open-minded investigators and teachers. An orthodox moral philosophy and the cult of technology were both transformed and their values preserved in a social science that combined the scientist's discipline with the philosopher's concern for the meaning of human existence."

This statement should prepare the reader for a curious ambivalence permeating much of Society: Political Economy and Sociology; 7. Scholarship and Social Action; 8. The German Influence and American Social Science; and 9. A Closing Word.

The chapter headings make it clear that in a short review not even a cursory discussion of the material presented can be attempted. This reviewer must content himself with touching on the salient points and taking a stance toward the general spirit permeating this fine contribution to institutional and intellectual history.

The preface tells us that the author attempts to focus on five representative German-trained scholars, namely, the historian, Herbert Baxter Adams of Johns Hopkins University; the political scientist, John W. Burgess of Columbia; the economist, Richard T. Ely of Wisconsin University; the sociologist, Albion Small of the University of Chicago, and the Harvard professor of social ethics, Francis Greenwood Peabody.

But with Teutonic thoroughness author Herbst requires an introductory "Anlauf" of four chapters before he can focus on these men and their "transfer of culture" activities. Interesting is Herbst's admission that his own findings concerning the good reception given in this country to German "Wissenschaft" (as transmitted by German-trained scholars) was "... more favorable than I had previously supposed."

Allied Troops Force Viet Cong Withdrawal

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—A 2,500-man allied task force blew up Viet Cong tunnels and abandoned huts in one segment of the D-Zone jungle Tuesday. Virtually unopposed, the soldiers found little life except hostile dogs. They shot every dog that barked.

Fresh human footprints in the paddyfields and dozens of empty thatched houses showed a wholesale withdrawal before the combined operation of Americans, Vietnamese and Australians, their second of the war. This time they concentrated on a section 30 miles northeast of Saigon.

More than 1,000 paratroopers of the U.S. Army's 173rd Airborne Brigade made up the biggest national contingent of the task force, as was the case in the first combined operation last week. All were lifted in by helicopters with orders to search out and destroy the Viet Cong and their homes, supplies and installations.

This followed up a bombardment of the jungle Monday with 500 tons of bombs by about 25 Guam-based B52 jets of the U. S. Strategic Air Command. The eight-engine monsters had staged their first war raid on a three-square mile area of the D Zone's 600-square miles June 18.

But there was, again, no significant contact with the enemy.

There was more action in smaller engagements elsewhere.

A battalion of U.S. Marines clashed with guerrillas during

Frank Messersmith, SIU Student, Hurt In Crash in Ireland

CARLOW, Ireland (AP)—Frank Messersmith, a young newspaper reporter from Springfield, Ill., suffered severe spinal injuries in an automobile accident last Friday at nearby Prumplestown Cross.

Messersmith, who had a summer job with the Nationalist and Leinster Times of Carlow, was riding in a car with three fellow employees when it collided with a second automobile. Others involved in the accident suffered only cuts and bruises.

A spokesman at St. Brigid's Hospital said Messersmith was recovering and was "fairly comfortable" but that it would be several weeks before he would be able to leave.

(Messersmith was enrolled at SIU during the regular school year and is in Ireland on a scholarship in international journalism made possible through the Reader's Digest Foundation. He had contracted to write a series of articles for the Daily Egyptian.)

Illinois Town to Feast On Presidential Beef

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson's ranch foreman Tuesday loaded six fat steers—wearing the "LBJ" brand—aboard a truck headed for Mount Carmel, Ill., where the cattle will help celebrate that city's 150th anniversary.

The steers, averaging 681 pounds apiece, will be barbecued at the Oct. 1-9 celebration.

a search-and-destroy operation in the area of Chu Lai, 52 miles south of Da Nang. A Marine spokesman said one suspect was killed and 35 were rounded up for questioning. One Marine was wounded slightly.

Down the coast, 80 Vietnamese troops were reported airlifted in to reinforce about 100 survivors of the Ba Gia outpost, which was overrun briefly Monday.

Giant B52 bombers carried out another "spoiling mission" bombing raid Wednesday on a jungle area 35 miles northeast of Saigon, U.S. military officials announced.

Johnson Voting Bill Threatened in House

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Southern Democratic leader urged support Tuesday for an alternative voting rights bill sponsored by the House Republican leadership.

Rep. Howard W. Smith, D-Va., speaking to his Southern colleagues as debate opened in the House, said the GOP-backed measure "lacks the dripping venom that pours from every sentence" of the Johnson administration's bill.

General debate is expected to last two days, with another two days of voting on amendments before the bill comes up for final action.

The deep partisan split in the House over a voting bill is a major weakness in the administration's position and Smith probed it quickly.

He said the administration bill is in direct, flagrant violation of the Constitution, while the GOP bill "would do the things that legitimately need to be done" to assure everyone the right to vote.

The chief difference between the two bills is in the way they would become operative. The administration bill would take effect immediately and automatically in seven Southern states requiring literacy tests, where less than 30 per cent of the adult population was registered or voted last November.

Holiday Traffic Toll Hits Record 552

By the Associated Press

The lethal combination of heavier travel and inferior safety performance of the part of drivers sent traffic deaths during the Fourth of July weekend soaring to a record 552 for a three-day observance of the holiday.

The final figure exceeded by a wide margin last year's previous record toll of 504 for a three-day Independence Day holiday. It came close to the record for a four-day Independence Day observance, 537 established in 1963.

A council spokesman said preliminary estimates indicate the number of fatalities per 100 million vehicle miles traveled during this year's Independence Day observance was close to 8.1.

Two North Vietnamese Sites Are Ready for Soviet Missiles

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department reported Tuesday two missile sites in North Viet Nam are now ready to take Soviet surface-to-air missiles and two other sites are rapidly nearing that state of readiness.

Heretofore the State Department had confirmed that one missile site had been observed in the Hanoi area and said there might be a second site in the same vicinity.

At the same time, neither State nor Defense Department authorities would completely rule out the possibility that Soviet surface-to-surface, medium range missiles are in North Viet Nam. In response to news reports to this effect the Defense Department has said only, "We have no evidence of any surface-to-surface sites in North Viet Nam."

Although reconnaissance planes and drones have kept close tabs on the progress of the surface-to-air missile site work no effort has been made to knock out the installations.

Contingency plans have been made to deal with this threat. The method to be used would depend on the stage of development of the sites at the time of any U.S. attack.

Cigarette Caution Label Wins Senate Approval

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate passed by voice vote Tuesday a compromise bill requiring that all packages of cigarettes carry a label asserting: "CAUTION: Cigarette Smoking May Be Hazardous to Your Health."

Senate Passes Succession Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate approved and sent to the states for ratification Tuesday a proposed constitutional amendment spelling out procedure to deal with presidential incapacity and to keep the vice presidency filled.

The Senate completed congressional action by a 68-5 roll-call vote—far over the two-thirds majority required. The House had accepted the compromise version by voice vote last Wednesday. President Johnson's signature is not required.

Under the proposed amendment, if the vice presidency becomes vacant, the president shall nominate a successor who would take office after confirmation by a majority vote of both houses of Congress.

If a president becomes incapacitated or otherwise unable to perform his responsibilities of office, the amendment deals with the delicate problems in the following fashion:

—If a president notifies Congress of his disability, the vice president would take over as acting president. He would serve until the president proclaimed himself able to resume his powers.

—If a president is unable or unwilling to declare his disability, the vice president would become acting president if he and a majority of the Cabinet—or a majority of such other body as Congress might later provide—sent a declaration to Congress that the president was unable to discharge his duties.

—A president could regain his powers by advising Congress that his inability no longer exists, unless this is challenged within four days by the vice president and a majority of the Cabinet.

—Any dispute over the ability of the president to regain his power would be settled by Congress.

JUDY WILLS

Gymnast Takes a Tumble

Feud in Sports World Stymies Career of SIU's Judy Wills

By Joe Cook

Judy Wills, the women's world tumbling and trampolining champion from Southern, has been rolling on the mats and bouncing on the trampoline most of her life.

Since she was eight, Miss Wills has thrived on competition. At that early age she was already a good ground tumbler, regularly doing "swingtime full twist" with the best.

Now, just 17 and a recent high school graduate from University School, Miss Wills has a long list of titles and championships that she has won.

The most recent championship she won was the United States Gymnastics Federation Championships last April in Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Wills walked away with both the tumbling and trampolining championships in what was to be her last meet until next fall. She was ruled ineligible for the AAU championships because the USFG championships were not sanctioned by the AAU.

Her teammates participated in the same meet, but all were given the go ahead to compete in the AAU National Championships last week except Miss Wills.

Coach Herb Vogel, who has had trouble with the AAU before, became upset when he found out Miss Wills was ruled ineligible.

Vogel said it appeared that the AAU was trying to protect its star pupil, Betty Avery, who performs only for the AAU.

Miss Wills had defeated Miss Avery at the World Tumbling and Trampoline championships last February in London.

An angry Vogel decided to put pressure on the AAU by pointing out its inconsistency. When he did this in an 8-hour session, the AAU promptly disqualified the entire team.

"This was especially disappointing to the team because the top six performers in the championships were eligible to go to Austria for the Gymstrada and I know two of our six girls would have been among the six," said Vogel.

This incident which prompted athletic director Donald Boydston to send telegrams to President Johnson and various senators, is just one of a series of incidents between the USFG and the AAU since the USFG was started three years ago.

Bill Meade, the men's gymnastics coach for Southern, explained the reasons why the USFG was started.

According to Meade, the AAU tends to have little consideration for its performers. Meade pointed to the fact of having all the championships on the east coast and continual last minute changes in meet organization as the main reasons why the college coaches felt a need to start a new organization.

"We have no trouble in our meets", said Meade. "Everything is run more smoothly and the judging is much fairer," he continued.

Most colleges and universities are members of the NCAA, which is a member of the USGF.

Of course the big problem in the struggle is that the Olympic Rules Committee recognizes the AAU.

"Judy's case points out the need of getting the two sides together," said Meade.

Schools Don't Use SIU's TV Circuit

Public schools in surrounding towns do not use SIU's closed-circuit television programs, a spokesman for WSIU-TV said Thursday.

A story in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian indicated that they did.

However, many of the public schools are members of the Southern Illinois Instructional Television Association and pay a fee to use certain television programs carried by SIU for the SIITA.

American League All-Star Team Is Heavy With Right-Handers

BOSTON(AP)—The American League invited the National League to go heavy on righthanded pitching in the July 13 All-Star game at Minnesota when it announced Tuesday a 17-man squad with only four left-handed batters and switcher Mickey Mantle.

Carl Yastrzemski of Boston and Jimmy Hall of Minnesota were the only lefties among the reserves named by Manager Al Lopez of Chicago.

Center fielder Vic Davalillo of Cleveland and shortstop Dick McAuliffe of Detroit were the two left-handed hitters in the starting line-up picked by the players, coaches and managers.

The New York Yankees, shut out of the starting line-up for the first time, had three men among the nine extra added by Lopez.

Mantle, still sidelined by a pulled muscle in his right thigh, was picked for the 14th time. Second baseman Bobby Richardson and catcher Elston Howard were the others.

Of the nine named by Lopez, eight finished second in the voting. The other, Mantle, was third in left field behind Willie Horton of Detroit and Yastrzemski, who also is injured.

The addition of center fielder Jimmy Hall, first baseman Harmon Killebrew and shortstop Zoilo Versalles to starting catcher Earl Battey gave the host Minnesota Twins four men in the first All-Star game to be played at Metropolitan Stadium.

Detroit had two starters, Horton in left and McAuliffe, and added a third player in Al Kaline, the center fielder who was picked for the 11th time.

Max Alvis, runner-up at third base to Baltimore's Brooks Robinson, joined starting right fielder Rocky Colavito and center fielder Davalillo as Cleveland's three-man contingent.

Baseball Salukis Are in the Cellar

Four straight losses at the hands of the University of Illinois last weekend dropped the Salukis into last place in the Midwest Summer Collegiate Baseball League.

The Illini, who were in last place before the start of the series, jumped from last place to a tie for second in the standings.

League-leading Parsons College defeated St. Louis University three out of four times in their weekend series to extend its hold on first place.
